> Humana Society. Mr. Editor: It is hoped that the annual meeting of the Humane Society this afternoon at 4 o'clock, in the Aldermen's room, will be largely attended. It is discouraging to the few who do the work of this society that hardly a baker's dozen in a city like ours meet to give the officers an encouraging word. We don't sak you for money, but your presence would be an encouragement.

As the captain's "striker" he had led a life of comparative ease, for that veteran officer had long since outlived any amhition to shine in the service, and looked become to anne in the service, and roused upon it only as a means of livelihood. At the outbreak of the waroli. Blauvelt was keeping a country store in Ohio, but dropped his yardstick and sugar scoop at the first call for volunteers, fought like a man all through the four years' contest was wounded and having times. contest, was wounded, and, having risen to be a major of volunteer infantry, he decided in '66 to stick to soldiering, for at that time it was easy to obtain a commission in the regular service if a man had any congressional influence or con-lections at all. When the army was renections at all. When the army was remodeled by the drastic process in 1671, and, as a first lieutenant, he was dropped to the supernumerary list from the regiment of infantry with which he had been sarving, Blauvelt decided that he was now too old to begin storekeeping' over again, and so he made vigorous effort to the retained in the army, and, together with a few other men who did not know a horse from a handsaw, was transferred to a vacancy in the cavalry, and ferred to a vacancy in the cavalry, and there the placed old fellow had been ever since.

Rejoining from the cast with a batch of recruits, immediately after the arrival of the regiment from Arizona Blauvelt had resumed command of C troop, and had given directions that the tall, gypsy had given directions that the tall, gypsy looking follow Welsh, who was one of the new comers, should be put in charge of his horses. Next he moved those veteran quadrupeds from the troop stables to a little barn in the back yard of his own quarters. Then Welsh himself moved his "kit" from barracks to a little room in the barn, and gradually became an inmace of the captain's bousehild thing his weeks mules the care. became an immate of the captain's bouse-held, taking his meals under the cap-tain's roof, performing no duty with the troop, exempted from the authority of the first sergeant, yet spending all his leisure moments in loading among the company's quarters, where he speedily without the transition of heirs early and grined the reputation of being surly and and a mischlef maker among the men. For a recruit who had only recently en-listed it was surprising how much he having been in service comewhere be-fore, and as he had no papers to show, he must be either a deserter or a "bob-tail" (a soldier whose discharge paper has had the "onaracter" out off). Welsh age is the "oneracter" out on, wear angrily denied this, and his ignorance of taber drill and certain troop details seemed to bear him out. "But theu," said Wren, "ho might have been in the 'dough boys." Welsh avoided the troop quarters for a while after this episode, and was more civil to the sergeants, but right after pay day he sgain appeared, eager to try his lack in any game going on! Then it transpired that, if not an expert with saddle and saber, he was with the cards, and the troopers lost their money to him without exactly understanding how. The first sergeant reported these occurrences to Capt. Blauvett, and the old man seemed greatly vexed. It was established that Welst, had been neglecting the horses while playing his game, but he was not relieved and ordered back to duty with the troop, as had been expected. If anyquarters for a while after this episode the troop, as had been expected. If anything he became more insolent in man-per to the sergeants than before. The whole affair seemed inaccountable to the other men.

One morning about a month after Welsh's arrival at the post Lieut, Hearn came leaping lightly up the steps to make an inspection of the barracks. Corp. Quinn, seeing him approach the quarters, had given word to the men, and those of them who were in shirt sleeves jumped into their flamel blouses, while others knocked the sakes out of their pipes and put them away. Three or four were scaled around a little table playing card:, and among these was the gypsy fellow Welsh, who had been there ever since guard mount. These men, too, sprang to their bunks and straightened up some items of their "kits." but Welsh still sat at the table grampling at the interrupt on to the game. "Put up those cards, Welsh," and a sergeam thould." "Eere comestite lieutenant." "What do I care?" was the surly answer. "I'm not under his orders. He's got no anthority over me."

piece of chamois sign and from the other one of the captain's big brass spins. There was no time for further remark, "Attention!" came the order from the sergeant, who happened to be nearest the door, and the lieutemant entered. Every man on the instant whipped off his cap, and facing the middle of the long room, stood erect at the feet of his bunk—every man except one. With his cap on the buck of his head, his matted hair hanging flown over his eyes, Welsh sat there at the table coolly polishing

"Get up there, Welshi" growled in low, stern tones the first sergeant, "Off with that cap; sir."

For all answer Welsh cocked his head

"Did you hear that order? Come to attention, sir!" repeated the sergeant.
And the men, astonished at the breach of discipline, locked curiously at the recruth, now slowly and scowlingly finding his feet. He had not removed his cap when the lieutenant stood before him.

"Why did you not rise with the other men, Welch? asked Mr. Hearn, in a quiet and deliberate tone oddly at variance with his usually quick and snappy manner, and the young officer looked straight into the soldier's eyes as he spoke. "Didn't suppose I had to," was the sulien reply.

"Why not?"

The garrison court which treed Trooper Welch for insubordinate conduct had found him guilty, despite his statement that according to the tactics he wasn't required to get up and saluta, he being at work. The evidence of the sengeants established the fact that he was playing eards when the lisotopant approached.

established the fact that he was paying cards when the lieutehant approached, and that the spur cleaning was a trans-parent sham, introduced for the occasion and for evident purpose. But in view of the fact that he claimed to believe that, as the captain's orderly, he was not under the lieutenant's orders, in view of the fact that he had apparently been only ten months in service, and of the further fact that his captain gave him further fact that his captain gave him an excellent character and pleaded for elemency for the recurit, the court saw fit to let him off easily with a fine. Mr. Mason, the adjutant, and Mr. Hearn were strongly of the opinion that he ought to be returned to the troop at ought to be recurred to the wood as once and targine his duties as a soldier. But the colonel was away just then; Maj. Kenyon, of the infantry, was temperarily in command, and be would not disturb old Blauvelt's "striker."

indeed, it seemed as though the troop commander was disposed to resent Hearn's having ordered the man to be confined, though the young officer was actually in command that day, the captain being on sick report. It is certain, too, that Mrs. Blanvelt made some very actimoni-Mrs. Blauvelt made some very acrimoni-ous criticisms of the lientenant's action, and that the first story in circulation in the garrison was by no means creditable to either his tact or temper. Welch spent only two days in the guard house this time, but his language during that brief incarceration was such as to lubrief incarcension was such as to in-bensify the feeling among the men that he was loud in his threats against the fleutenant, and full of, argument as to the propriety of his conduct.

"I was at work, by Golf and had par-ferler occupation" to use the hargange ficular occupation, to use the language of the Tactics, and you'll find it in paragraph 797, and I wasn't required to rise and uncover. Look, at it and you will see for yourselves," he complained.

And it was Sergt, McKenna, of the infantry, who retorted:

"And where did you, a cavalraman nantry, who recorted:

"And where did you, a cavalryman, learn the numbers of the paragraphs infantry tactics, Welsh? And while you were about it why didn't you learn paragraph 803 as well? That's the one that covers your case, me buck, and, begadt if I'd been there you'd 'a' dropped that or I'd seen voor your feet de —d quick, or I'd 'a' jerked the backbone out of yees. Where did you learn your intentry tactics, I say?'

And here Welsh could only redden with mipgled wrath and confusion. From this time on the impression gained round that he was a deserter from some ground that he was a deserter from some foot regiment, and one who had again emisted in the army, but under on assumed name.

Within the week after Capt. Blauvelt's departure Trooper Welsh was twice again confined and brought before a gar-rison court. He had accompanied the captain's family to the train, and carry-ing Mrs. Blauvelt's numerous bags and ing Mrs. Blauvelt's numerous bags and baskets into the sleeper was borne away, apparently unavoidably. The conductor wired back that he had safely landed him at Earclay, a thriving little town ten miles to the east, and that he had abundant means to buy his bloket back; but he was gone forty-eight hours, and at the expiration of that time was dumped in a disheveled condition at the post by the town marshal, with the information that if it had not been for the formation that if it had not been for the crossed subers on his cap he would have had him in the county jull for drunken and disorderly conduct and resistance to the official of the law. "Where does he get his money?" asked that official. "He smashed about twenty dollars worth of glass windows and juid all, fines, costs and damages, and yet had some ten dollars to supre."

To Sail Under The Water. PLANS OF THE SUBMARINE BOAT NOW BEING CONSTRUCTED IN DETROIT—ELEC-TRICITI FOR THE MOTOS—THE BUILDER OLAIMS THAT THE YESSEL WILL BE

PREFECTLY SAFE.

The new submarine boat which is being Tuesday M. rning, Dec. 30 built at the Detroit Boat Works is sur-rounded with more mystery than the average ghost story. In the first place the boat works people say they are constructing it for a man named Grant, and all information must be obtained from him. Workmen employed on the boat pretend great ignorance of the purpose for which it is designed. The man they look to for instruction they know as Grant, and he watches and superintends the work general shape of the boat is apparent. The frame is already up, and some of the with $500,000 in railroad bonds from his timbers have been bent on. As it leys on the stocks it looks like some great double-pointed toy. It is forty feet long from point to point through the center line, and controller trees to the greatest double makes the total sum devoted to the work and credible trees to the greatest double the center line. point to point through the center line, and gradually rises to the greatest length in the center. The slope of the top and more nearly straight. A cross section of the center of the boat shows an ellipse sixteen feet from top to bottom and once feet between sides. The itabers which have slready been bent on are of three by six loch eak, laid with the narrowest edge against the frame, thus giving six inches of solid oak between the inside and obtside of the best. These timbers are mortised and joined together at the ends by ties botts. At the center of the boat is a place for a email tower, about five feet in circumference and five feet high.

It is related that at a reception given by the lecture at Carbondale, Ps., Mr. Hendrick, a wealthy manufacturer, expressed to Statley bits supprise of the who his men were dying for want of they didn't fish, since they were so near the river. Mr. Stanley's face was a tay of the best. OREAT SPEED NOT EXPECTED.

"If will be impossible to get great speed from the boat from the fact that the belassman could not see well enough under water. The steering of the boat will be escomplished by an electrically worked rudder which will be placed under the stern cone and worked from the turret. All the machinery will be controlled from that point. For lighting purposes we shall use lucandecent electric light, the storage batteries supplying the power. This will not take any air, and will lead so thatch more for the even. Compressed air chambers will be located in the boat, and the air can be turned on as desired. By skil of cheesicals for puriffing the air it is calculated that two me can live very comfortably twenty four hours in the boat.

He-vy windows will enable the men to see around them, and while the boat a hot being constructed with any special idea except to prove that the inventor's theory is sound, there are a multitude of uses to which it can be put. The boat will be built of six inch oak, and that planked over with regular planks. Steel cone; nine feet long, will cover either end, the whole being hermetically scaled from call to turict. No arrangements are being made for persons leaving the beat, except at the surface, nor will any be made until after it has been proven a success. It will after it has been proven a success. after it has been proven a success. It will be ready for a trial trip here in the

The Marquise de Tuileyrand Perigord, who was Miss Curtis, of Boston, is enjoy-ing her visit to the United States most theroughly. It is over twenty-two years ince she was here, and she intends to make the best of her present visit. She is still the guest of Mrs. W. A. Perry of 23 West Thirty-eighth atreet, New York, who has already given entertainments in her honor and intende giving several more.

Miss Marlowe is now sufficiently recovered to be able to be up most of the day and to walk about the room. Her illness has left none of the lingering complications which so often survive such attacks, and there is every promise that when her recovery shall be complete, has been for special that the best for system years past. She has deshied, under the addise of bor physicians, that sha will not attempt to return to the stage this season.
